ABOUT SENATOR BAYARD.

The editor of the Tribune is mortally offended because of a paragraph which appeared on the first page of the Chronicle a day or two ago, to the effect that the abilities of Senator Bayard are overrated. The "usually amiable editor" gives vent to his injured feelings by talking about our humble efforts as "puerile jottings." Now, this mortifies us. We are not over-sensitive on that point, and do not, ordinarily, care for such criticisms. But coming from that source, it grieves us; and we beg of our good-natured, warm-hearted, vigorous, able, industrious, incisive, pungent, spicy neighbor not to say it again.

But, in all seriousness, let us see about his man Bayard. We said his ability is overrated. We concede that he is a man of fair average ability, and take pleasure in adding that he is a man of pure character, and, in point of honesty, far in advance of the average politician. But in point of actual ability, he is not the equal of Thurman, or Conkling or Blaine or Edmunds, or of Senator Harris of our own State. He is not superior to Ben. Hill (intellectually), or Lamar, or Beck. He lives in the little State of Delaware, which he carries in his pockets and uses it as he sees proper. We admit that he has not abused his power over his own people, and that his record is creditable. But had he resided in Tennessee, and had expressed his views on the currency question as he has done, he could no more have held his seat in the Senate than he could have obtained one in the British House of Lords. The Tribune editor knows this. He knows that he, himself, has gone upon the stump and antagonized Senator Bayard's views. Why, does not he remember how, when a few years ago, after his appointment to the United States Senate by Governor Porter, Hon. D. M. Key in a mild way, took grounds in favor of hard money, and how he was pursued by the Democratic organs, some of them going so far as to demand his resignation? Everybody knows that whatever prominence Senator Bayard has grown out of his unswerving devotion to hard money principles, and his antagonism to a majority of his party, and everybody knows very well that he could not have made that record in any one of the larger Southern or Western States. Even Thurman was forced by his party to back down in Ohio. In Delaware, the field is an exceedingly small one, a "pocket borough," as an exchange styles it, and it did not require much skill to cultivate and hold it. The competition has been little or nothing.

Senator Bayard's father and his grandfather were his predecessors in the Senate. He will hold his seat as long as he lives and where he dies, he will bequeath it to his son, if he has one of proper age living. He has a death grip on Delaware, and will never relax it. He is a much better man than ordinary politicians, but this does not signify that he is a great man. He has no temptations like those to which Senators from larger states are subjected. He has comparatively few constituents, and no one to contest his seat. He has no temptation to set his sails for the popular breeze, as many politicians do, and has the goodness to do pretty near right. But he is not a great statesman, in the sense of having originated great measures or inaugurating great policies, which have benefited the whole country.

MORE ABOUT THE EXODUS.

The Knoxville Tribune insists that the exodus of seven hundred colored persons of all ages and sexes from North Carolina to Indiana, is an evil of such magnitude as to call for the interposition of the strong arm of Congress to stop it. The two hundred thousand Democrats of the Hoosier State regard this ingress of colored population upon soil where white men rule, as a menace to their liberties, and through their leader, Daniel W. Voorhees, they appeal to the country, through Congress, for protection. The Tribune hears their cry of distress and promptly comes to their relief, protesting at the same time, that an investigation of this great and impending disaster to Indiana Democracy was not conceived in a partisan spirit. Such protestation we will not discuss. We have our own opinion of its sincerity, and the Tribune has no means of producing any evidence that will change our mind. Our readers know, as do the readers of the Tribune, that Mr. Voorhees is one of the most extreme partisans in all the land. Where is there an intelligent man that believes these proceedings, which have cost the Government thousands of dollars, were instituted for the good of the few colored people who have left or contemplate leaving North Carolina, or that they were necessary for the protection of Indiana? The writer of the editorial in the Tribune himself does not believe it.

We admit that the colored people may incur great suffering in the change of homes and locality, as the Tribune says. But that is no answer to our statement in former issues of the Chronicle, that they emigrate for the same reason that white men leave East Tennessee for Kansas, Texas and the West. Thousands of white persons who have gone West, have suffered intensely. But that is no proof that their object in moving was not to improve their condition. And again, have we not had at all times, agents of the Western railroads among us, holding out inducements to our people to go West? By such means, thousands of them have gone West and many have suffered and sickened and died, but no one has thought it a subject that called for Congressional investigation.

The fact is, colored people have gone from the South to the North-west, and unless they are better treated in some localities in the South, they will continue to go, and they will go by thousands where they have only gone in tens. And no Congressional investigation on the line pursued by the Voorhees Committee, is going to check them. Self preservation is the first law of nature, and it applies to colored people as well as to whites.

BENSON'S CAPCIN, POROUS PLASTER.

A WORD TO THOSE WHO USE POROUS PLASTER. It is a universally acknowledged fact that Benson's Capcin, Porous Plaster is Superior to all Others.

The great demand for them has caused a number of unscrupulous parties to make and sell worthless imitations under similar sounding names. As the market is flooded with inferior plasters, the only way to be sure of getting the best is to know which is the best. It was known that some of the cheap plasters have been examined and found to contain ingredients which would cause the plaster to crack and fall off, and in some cases to cause the plaster to become so hard that it would not be removed. CAUTION—See that the word CAPCIN on each plaster is correctly spelled.
